LITTLE BOOKS FOR THE BIG QUESTIONS OF FAITH

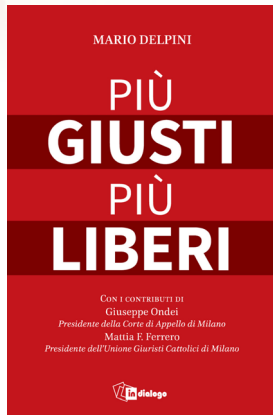

Which God?

How does one talk about God today, in a context of religious pluralism? What discernment does Christian testimony require to rediscover the courage to express itself while respecting the religious identity of those around us? How can we address the numerous biblical texts that speak of the universal salvific will of the Christian God without falling into a minimalist approach of mere religious tolerance or respect for freedom of conscience?

2. A Credible God?
3. Is God with Me?
4. Do I Speak with God?

More Just More Free

The Archbishop of Milan clearly discerns the characteristics of our time: rules and behaviors in the fields of economics, society, justice, and politics; he denounces their deviations; he calls for personal and collective commitments; he urges Christians to take responsibility for the future of the polis.

To Fight the War

What Pope Francis has long referred to as the “Third World War in pieces” is a reality that spans continents and paralyzes the future, preventing the alignment of the “pillars of peace,” as Pope John XXIII called them: freedom, justice, truth, and love. Marco Tarquinio, Sandro Calvani, and Antonio Spadaro reflect on what it means to promote peace. It thus emerges that “fighting war” ultimately means constantly striving to understand the “geopolitics of war and peace,” gaining the awareness that every war is “against humanity.”

Disability The Weight of Words

A book meant for everyone: people with disabilities and their families, but especially to those who work in a crucial and decisive way with words: journalists who must report, define, and contextualize stories of disability; and “operators” (social workers, therapists, administrators, etc.) who must bring to life projects, protocols and practices within the vast range of care relationships.

Current affairs

“If the world feels estranged from Christianity, Christianity does not feel estranged from the world”: these were the words of Paul VI from Bethlehem in 1964. Peace, justice, communication: these are just some of the themes that challenge the believer’s conscience. The choice of concise and accessible volumes for a broad audience does not detract from the prestige of the authors or the depth of the analyses presented. Keeping the debate on current issues alive without trivializing them or offering simplistic or naive solutions: this is the challenge of a publishing initiative that keeps pace with the times.

Young People Hungry for Christ

This volume presents two previously unpublished lectures given by Giovanni Testori at the Ambrosianeum Foundation in Milan in January and October of 1979. Testori explores the relationship between youth and faith, and ponders how to present Christ in the contemporary world—insights that remain relevant and shed light on Testori’s connection to the city of Milan.

Faith, Politics, and Prophecy

The Relevance of Giorgio La Pira in a World in Search of Peace

A man of ardent faith, a prophet of peace, and a politician, La Pira was a mystic turned politician. The texts collected here outline his human, religious, and political journey. He was a member of the Constituent Assembly, a deputy in the first Legislature, Undersecretary at the Ministry of Labor, and Mayor of Florence. In 2018, Pope Francis recognized his heroic virtues.

Aldo Moro Man of Dialogue

The Intellectual, the Believer, the Statesman

Moro is one of the most significant figures in contemporary Italy. A prominent politician, he played a crucial role in the history of the Republic for at least thirty years. His biography reflects the story of the Catholic leadership class, formed during the years of dictatorship, which managed one of the most delicate phases of the governance of democratic Italy.

Dialogue Always with Everyone

Dialogue between women and men, among Christians of different denominations; dialogue between cultures and religions, especially with Muslims and Jews. Dialogue as a way of life and a form of thought.

Furthermore, the challenge of nonviolence in the Middle East, a region stained by conflict. The life of Father Paolo Dall'Oglio and his final words before his dramatic disappearance are a call, sometimes a desperate cry. They are words of hope despite the looming possibility of failure and outline a path—the most difficult and the most evangelical.

My Testament

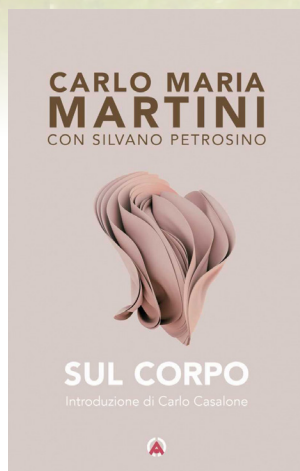

With this volume, the publication of the unpublished lectures given by Father Paolo Dall'Oglio in the months preceding his expulsion from Syria has begun. Commenting on the initial form of the Rule of the Monastic Community of Deir Mar Musa, which he founded, Dall'Oglio offers his spiritual testament: a personal journey of faith as well as a prophetic vision on the Church and the world.

This vision opens up new horizons: ecumenism, fraternity among men and women, dialogue with Islam... all themes dear to the teaching of Pope Francis.

Witnesses

"Contemporary man listens more willingly to witnesses than to teachers." This was the expression of Pope Paul VI fifty years ago, and his words still resonate with truth today. Many volumes are dedicated to the men and women who have shaped the history of the Church and the society in which they lived.

Alongside the series Testimoni del nostro tempo (Witnesses of Our Time) (see adjacent page), the project to publish the final lectures of Father Paolo Dall'Oglio is featured. A Jesuit and founder of the Monastic Community of Deir Mar Musa in Syria, Dall'Oglio was a prophetic voice of dialogue between faiths and cultures, and was abducted in Syria in July 2013.

About the Body

The text addresses a “difficult” and controversial topic, starting with some of the questions that stir our consciences, challenging the reader in search of answers. It is not a systematic discussion but rather brief reflections, aimed at freeing oneself from preconceived ideologies, insular cults, and narrow specifications.

Melt the Heart

On the Way to Jerusalem with Paul

This is a beautiful collection of texts that reveal Martini's dream: a Church free from the powers of this world, capable of following its own path, making room for people, and instilling courage. A Church that is open and welcoming, “a broad way, where there is room for everyone,” a people of God walking together.

“The Church, as a path, is broad and welcoming, open and inviting. This peaceful journey of a people of free and conscious men and women is, in the end, the only hope for a world shaken by conflicts and threats.”

The Ages of Life

A reflection that addresses the theme of the wisdom of life through its various stages: childhood, youth, adulthood, and old age. These intense meditations aim not only to help contemporary individuals navigate the countless challenges that daily life imposes with serenity and awareness but also to equip them to transition from one stage of life to another without succumbing to the weight of inevitable and increasing difficulties and responsibilities, which are the true sources of our growth.

Carlo Maria Martini

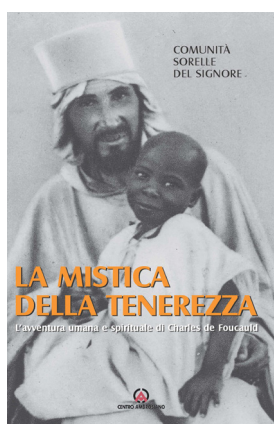

Carlo Maria Martini (1927-2012), a Jesuit and internationally renowned biblical scholar, served as the Archbishop of Milan from 1980 to 2002. Formerly the rector of the Pontifical Biblical Institute and the Pontifical Gregorian University, he was chosen to succeed Ambrose as the Archbishop of Milan, ordained as bishop, and created a cardinal by Saint John Paul II.

Upon turning 75, he submitted his resignation to the Pope and moved to Jerusalem in 2003 to resume biblical studies and dedicate himself to prayer. He returned to Italy due to health reasons and passed away at the Aloisianum Institute in Gallarate.

The Mysticism of Tenderness

The Human and Spiritual Adventure of Charles de Foucauld

The volume presents the life of Brother Charles, both by revisiting the key moments of his biography and by highlighting the fundamental aspects of his spirituality: friendship with Jesus, life in Nazareth, the apostolate of kindness, universal fraternity, and the dimensions of manual labor and geographical and cultural exploration.

God My Brother

Charles de Foucauld
One Meter from the Mystery

An unprecedented model of fraternity, perhaps even unsettling, because it arises from an assumption that has been little explored even by theology: God has become a brother. This assumption was overlooked until Charles de Foucauld made it the focal point of his entire life and spirituality. He did so starting from the contemplation of Jesus' hidden life in Nazareth.

Charles de Foucauld

Born in Strasbourg in 1858, Charles de Foucauld had a tumultuous youth and took a trip to Morocco, where he was deeply impressed by the faith of Muslims. At the age of twenty-eight, he "rediscovered" the Christian faith and realized his religious vocation. After spending several years in a Trappist monastery, first in France and then in Syria, he left monastic life and spent some years in Nazareth and Jerusalem. He then moved to the Algerian desert, where he built his home, the Khaoua (brotherhood), in Beni Abbès to be close to the poorest people and the Tuareg, with whom he felt a deep fraternal bond. He died in Tamanrasset on December 1, 1916, killed during an assault on his fortress.

Beatified on November 13, 2005, by Pope Benedict XVI, he was canonized on May 15, 2022, by Pope Francis.

The Boldness of the Gospel

The Life and Spirituality of Madeleine Delbr l

A portrait of Madeleine Delbr l, a mystic and poetess from the first half of the twentieth century, regarded as one of the most significant spiritual figures of the 20th century.

This book, through a blend of exemplary life experiences and faith, brings us closer to this admirable figure. The volume is accompanied by an anthology of texts by Madeleine Delbr l, with a preface by Pierangelo Sequeri.

Church and Society

The Church is a living reality, made up of people and situations in constant evolution: therefore, the challenges it faces are numerous and always different. This is why prophetic personalities, like Madeleine Delbr l, are needed, alongside men and women who live and work in everyday family, parish, and social settings, transforming these places into spaces for growth and well-being for all.

From the Everyday to the Eternal

The Way of the Disciple

In this volume, the Author brings to life the footsteps of Jesus, his words, his decisions, his care for the least, his encounters and clashes with human misery. All of this is meant to rediscover words that today's disciple and the Church, often surprised by perilous journeys, can revisit to keep hope alive.

Challenging the Crisis

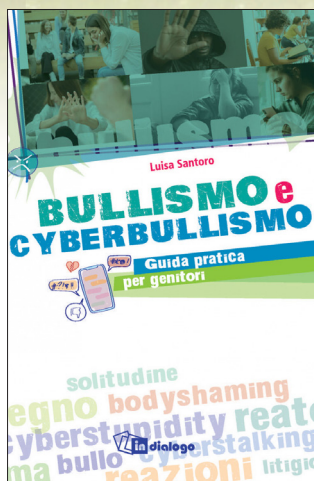

Paul's Creative Mission in Corinth

The Paul we encounter in these pages is a man who loves the Lord so intensely that he cannot help but care for the men and women he meets. He is also a man grappling with the doubts and anxieties that affect the lives of believers. At the heart of the crisis is the question of death and resurrection: "If there were no resurrection of the dead, what would become of me in the end? What would become of those I hold most dear? In short, what meaning would life have as such?"

Why Do You Do It?

A Map to Understand the Universe of Children

15x21 cm

Starting from real life situations that educators and parents may encounter, we understand the behaviors and emotions of young children. We get to know boys and girls dealing with anger, sadness, fear, and a wide range of other emotional states, which manifest through gestures and reactions that challenge us.

In this journey, the author invites adults to stand beside children, to “be” in relationship with them, to support rather than stimulate, to welcome rather than entertain, and to set boundaries rather than activate them.

I Am Not Crystal, but Diamond

What would happen if our children began to perceive themselves as “crystals in a shop of elephants”? Fragile, confused, and scared. At the mercy of a world without reference points to cling to. This is how adolescents have been described in recent years. But what if, instead, they are embracing the challenges of a deeply complex and evolving world that certainly puts them at a disadvantage, but at the same time fascinates and stimulates them to understand themselves with greater awareness?

The meditations collected in this volume are born from the pen of a “lover of the Gospels,” as Don Angelo Casati likes to describe himself. They arise from a daily familiarity with the Scriptures, aimed at preaching, certainly, but above all as an essential nourishment for life. Organized according to a “diachronic” scheme that blends the accounts of the four evangelists, the meditations trace a sort of biographical profile of Jesus, following His steps from the dusty roads of Galilee to the holy city of Jerusalem, through the years of hidden life in Nazareth and His public ministry.

During his visit to Gubbio, Francis goes out to meet the wolf: this is the astonishing account of how things actually went... (freely inspired by the “The Little Flowers of Saint Francis” and other stories).

IVANO CERIANI studied at the Brera Academy of Fine Arts (Milan), with a thesis on the expressive and artistic potential of illustration. He then devoted himself to mural decoration in Italy and abroad, painting and teaching Pictorial Disciplines.

In a poor peasant family, a boy was born whom they named Felice. And Felice he was—always on the move, always looking up at the “grown-ups” and asking why. The young parish priest in his village, Samarate, taught a group of children, including Felice. With him, they studied catechism, learned to read, write, and do arithmetic, but also how to serve as altar boys. For Felice, this was the most wonderful thing—being close to Jesus, able to talk to Him, and telling Him he wanted to be with Him for his whole life.

When he felt old enough, he told his parents he wanted to become a friar. His father, though saddened by the thought of parting from his son, took him to the convent. In front of the Capuchin superior, he signed his consent with a cross.

But one day, Arturo has a beautiful and unforgettable experience: the apostles of Jesus choose him to accompany the Master during His triumphant entry into Jerusalem, amidst a rejoicing crowd. And the donkey cannot remain silent: he gathers his courage and shares the story with the haughty horses, who mock and mistreat him... but in the end, they will learn a valuable lesson.
